

ALAN CALLANDER

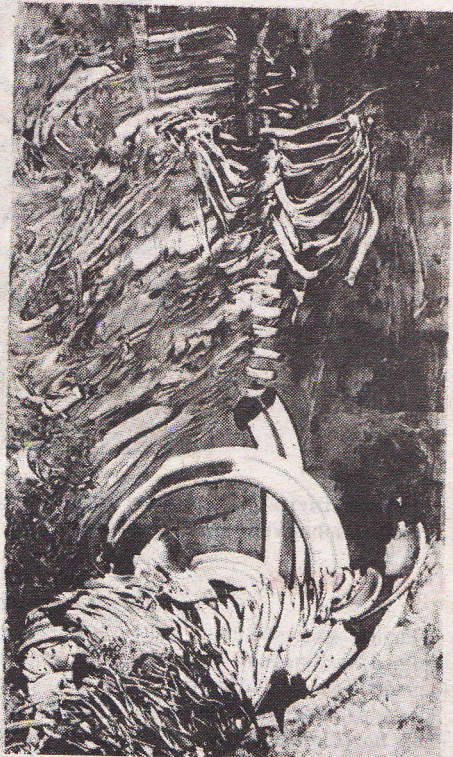

Alan Callander will debut his site-specific, two-channel audio-video installation, "Outside/In," as part of the "Body of Work" exhibition at Studio 1469.

GALLERY OPENING OF THE WEEK

Studio 1469 is not easy to find. The multipurpose arts space, which from time to time serves as a beautiful little gallery, sits in a renovated garage in Columbia Heights at the end of an alley off 15th Street NW, between Harvard Street and Columbia Road. It's worth looking for.

The exhibition "Body of Work," which opens Friday with a reception from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., is also about things that are hidden. In Evan Hume's found photographs of purported UFOs, and in Alan Callander's video installation and Jenny Walton's monoprints — both of which explore themes of health and the human body — semi-abstract imagery is used to suggest the state of the unseen universe.

— Michael O'Sullivan

JENNY WALTON

Through Aug. 25 at 1469 Harvard St. NW, rear (Metro: Columbia Heights). 202-518-0804. www.studio1469.com. Free. The gallery will host a closing party on Aug. 25 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

For more information about gallery exhibitions, go to goingoutguide.com/museums.

A monotype from Jenny Walton's "Fluidity" series, part of the three-person show, "Body of Work," at Studio 1469.